About the Artist

“The Jeffowary” is an amateur pianist with nearly 30 years’ experience covering a diverse range of music on the piano. His current range represents an extensive cross-section of Western music from the Baroque period, all the way to contemporary hits.

More recently, he began to include more ‘world music,’ drawing upon Latin American influences – salsa, bachata, son – as well as Kizomba, an African dance originating in Angola and exported globally.

Each selection, aside from the “Classical” category, is “The Jeffowary’s” original arrangement done completely by ear.

Originally from Southern California, “The Jeffowary” began learning music at the age of 3, when it became apparent that he was listening to music on the radio and commercial jingles and quickly figuring out how to play them on piano with no training.

He began formal lessons and trained as a classical pianist for nearly 10 years under the direction of a Professor of Music in the Conservatory of California State University, Long Beach and California State University, Fullerton – but took a long break during his teenage years due to various competing demands.

As a young artist, “The Jeffowary” regularly performed in recitals and local competitions – notably the annual Bach Festivals and Mozart Festivals, as well as played selections for intermissions for local, non-denominational church and community groups.

He never stopped arranging music, though – as the 90s and 2000s alternative rock scene shaped his repertoire extensively – much to the disapproval of his music instructor(s).

After University, “The Jeffowary” moved to New York City and began his career in a completely unrelated field. During this time, he mostly did not own his own piano or keyboard. In 2016, he moved to Sydney, Australia and discovered various public pianos that allowed him to keep some music alive – as well as an outlet to perform for others.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, it provided the inspiration to purchase his own piano and resume private music lessons.

“The Jeffowary” has earned High Distinction on the AMEB Certificate of Performance practical exam, and is studying for his AMusA and LMusA diplomas.

He currently has no aspirations to turn music into a profession, but would consider the occasional gig or performance opportunity under the right conditions.

He mostly wishes to share the passion of music and provide an authentic, quality experience in public spaces for all to enjoy.
